WHAT PARTICIPANTS HAD TO SAY:

“Before we had our carousels, we had to do our inventory manually. The carousels give us an immediate count of what we have. The carousel just gives us a better, immediate view of what we have in our inventory and of our usage reports so that we can cut back on the things we don't use much. That allows us to reduce costs.”

“Aside from improving efficiency, pharmacy automation can help minimize medication spending by allowing providers to optimize inventory tracking and thus minimize how much inventory they have. Talyst is a standout in this area. Talyst customers tie their ability to reduce medication spending to the reduction in medication waste that is facilitated by the system’s inventory control management. ‘Talyst’s system is very effective and helps us control and reduce inventory. We have less expired medication’ was the response from one survey.”

WHAT PARTICIPANTS HAD TO SAY:

“Our implementation with Talyst over a year ago reduced our inventory substantially. We took $250,000 out of our inventory when we did that”

“Talyst provides accurate data when their product is used the way it is supposed to be used”

“When we went to Talyst, we moved to a single formulary across the system to whittle down the size of the inventory.”

“The central pharmacy automation has all but eliminated the tedium in our work flow and is both more accurate and faster.”

“Because of the manner in which we use the AutoCarousel, especially at our large hospitals, we now have centralized distribution. Those hospitals are doing bin fills from the pharmacy every day. Here, we have decentralized distribution with Pyxis cabinets. We don’t have the carousels. There is a lot of scanning of individual products, especially for bin fills, and the process is not automated. So there is movement in the pharmacy to get dispensing done and to get the appropriate items scanned in and out of the Talyst tools.”

“Our staff productivity is improved by our Talyst carousel. One person can order and another can pick and pack.”

“Talyst’s system is very effective and helps us control and reduce inventory. We have less expired medication”

“Because of the integration between the RxStation and the Talyst inventory control product, we can find the information we need in one spot.”
